

Catch of the Day

By Mark Edgemon

All you can eat is what they say,
Brady Eaton heard it differently that day.
The Chinese Buffet was a challenge, a dare,
And a chance to impress his lady fair.

With his fifth helping, Katie said wait,
As he continued to put on the weight.
So Katie did only what Katie could do,
The only way to stop him that she knew.

She was certain she could do it and that she was able,
So she threw up on him and all over their table.
All over his shrimp and his corn on the cob,
Showing him, she too...could be a slob.

He wasn't going to take it and got up to leave,
She wasn't the only one who was peeved.
But he slipped and fell and lost his desire,
Landing face down in her vomitous mire.

The smell of her bile made him spew,
She couldn't help it and did it again too.
Half the restaurant left, the other half were dismayed,
Determined to get their money's worth, they stayed.

The End