

Who Do You Want To Be?

By Mark Edgemon

Wanting what you can't have leaves one wanton,
Sapping your strength, dividing your focus,
And like the mythical dog with his bone, causes one to lose
What they DO have, to a fantasized nightmare!

The grass is not always greener and even if it was,
What can you do with brown grass, dirt or snow?
The balance in life is to be content with what you have,
While still reaching for that which is ever so slightly beyond your grasp.

No one has it better than you, for even if they do...they don't!
They can't make you happy, satisfy your soul or love your life.
It is only in your power to change your destiny into one your willing to die for.
And when that is true, for you...then you are ready to live for it as well!

The End