

One Day When

By Marla J. Deaton

You cling to the past
So you can't let go
And live life looking behind.

You comfort yourself
About what will be one day
While the moment slips away.

You sit around and wait to live
As if you don't know how
You store all your hopes in the one day when.

But the one day when, is now.