

Afraid of Bush

By Robin B Lipinski

(Inspired by Mark Edgemon's challenge to write a poem based on Dennis Goode's audio comedy piece, "Bill Clinton's Airline Rescue".)

Not all that good with women,
You know,
That President Bill Clinton.
I mean, come on now, have you seen those women?

It will do no good to list them by name as their own pictures put them to shame,
But even with four beers and squinting,
It makes a red-blooded man think of men.

Now why he does what he does has an explanation,
Hidden deep inside this Bill Clinton,
Not obvious to your everyday mortal man,
But the poet knows, as there is not much that escapes him.

Poor old Bill has much bravado,
His libido is an open book,
There even is the meaning of 'is' to cover his alibi, but to me, his cover is broken.

It is not Hillary or his mother,
Nor his many many girl friends,
No my good friend,
The fact of the matter is for all his desire,
For all of his talk,
This Bill actually lusts after men.

The End