

Winter's Touch

By Robin Lipinski

She reached out and touched hard this morning,
Her icy finger.

Warm and dreaming,
I slept.

Waking to see the moon surrender,
Looking outside,
We wept.

The kiss of winter is here,
Her frosty white dress drapes over the memories of fireweed and fun.

Adieu summer,
Till next year.

The End